PLEASURES BY THE CLAN

Great Picnic at Caledonia Park Saturday

WITH 1000 IN ATTENDANCE

Fine List of Sports and Games And
An Exciting Five-A-Side
Foot Ball Tournament.

Of all the picnics held at Caledonia park each summer there is not one that is looked forward to as much as the picnic given by Clan Gordon, No. 12, O. S. C., and the 21st annual picnic and games held at that favorite outing grounds Saturday added another to their most successful list of holidays. There could not have been a better day for the occasion. The hot sunshine and cool breeze were just the right kind of weather for the people to enjoy themselves and for the participants in the games and races. The people began to go as early as ten o'clock. By two o'clock in the afternoon there were fully 1,000 people on the grounds.

New features were added to the entertainment for this year by the amusement committee and without doubt made the best programme that the Clan have ever gotten up. The concert given by the Montpelier Military band alone was worth the price of admission to the grounds and was listened to by a large part of the people throughout the day. Gilbertson's orchestra of five pieces furnished music for dancing in the pavilion. The best of ice cream, coffee and sandwiches, pop corn, bananas and soda water were sold by the clansmen.

"Come awa", lads, yelled Robert Gordon, as he entered the crowd to try his clever game of throwing wooden balls into small tubs getting a cigar for every ball you were lucky enough to put in.

"He Haver, and her name was Maude" was all Peter Brown had to shout to shout to bring a big crowd his way to try a shot at Maude, who had a ticklish spot in her side which if you hit with a ball she would give a sharp kick and you were rewarded with a genuine fifteen cent cigar. Throwing at the long haired dolls was favorite sport for the boys at which stand John Malden was in charge. One of the prettiest things of the day was the sword dance and the Highland reel given by Mayor Barclay's three youngest daughters, Maggie, Flora and Grace, on a platform arranged in the middle of the field, music being furnished by W. B. Scott on a bagpipe.

As is his custom each year Mayor Barclay gave a dime to each one of the children on the grounds. All the children were lined up in the field and numbered 187 boys and 1123 girls, taking $31.10 in dimes to supply them.

The substantial prizes offered in the games and races brought out many contestants and much sport was enjoyed by the crowd in watching the heated contests. The amusement committee through whose efforts the success of the picnic is due was composed of Joseph Graham, chief; Alexander Hadden, treasurer; James Erick, secretary; James Hector, janitor; Robert Reid, Lowell McLeod, Robert Shaw, Maitland Smith, Murdo Campbell and George Riddle. The committee had an efficient corps of assistants to whom they wish to extend their thanks and also to those who kindly contributed prizes.

FIVE SHOTS AT SKULKER

May Be Trap Was Laid For Chief of Police Brown

LATE SATURDAY NIGHT

Man Tailed Mrs. Brown and Daughter
Home and Then Concealed Himself In Bushes In Front of the House.

A man whose skulking actions had attracted the attention of Mrs. Patrick Brown and daughter, Marguerite, and at least one other person on Prospect street, was driven from a clump of bushes in front of Chief of Police Brown's residence on Allen street at a late hour Saturday night by Chief Brown and Officer Faulkner who had hastened there at a telephone summons from the chief's wife. It is the belief of the police that the man had concealed himself with the design to waylay the chief of police on his way home.

Mrs. Brown and daughter started home shortly before 10 o'clock, and when on Main street caught sight of a man who was evidently following them. Not liking his appearance they stopped at the door of the police station for Chief Brown. The latter was not in, and Officer Faulkner responded that he was busy in the court room up stairs, a raid just having been made. While Mrs. Brown was talking with the officer the man who had been following passed and walked ahead, having had opportunity in passing to hear the conversation. The women decided to start on alone. After they had passed the bridge at the foot of Prospect street hill, the man stepped out of a place of concealment and followed them.

Mrs. Brown saw the skulker and warned her daughter not to look around, but to walk along as if they hadn't seen him. The man followed them up the hill, a distance of quarter of a mile. Just as they were about to turn into their own yard, on the outskirts of the city, they saw the same man following a hundred yards back. Entering the house they turned out all the lights except one in the kitchen, so as to see if the man passed along Allen street. The man stopped in the road in front of the house. Then Mrs. Brown decided to telephone her husband of the suspicious actions of the man and to warn him to look out when going home.

Presently the man entered the yard and approached the house, walking around the house and taking a stand in the barn door and looking into the kitchen, where the light was burning. Now thoroughly alarmed the women telephoned the police station that the man was in the yard. Chief Brown and Officer Faulkner started on the run for the former's home. Meanwhile the skulker left the barn door and going to the road again, entered a clump of bushes on the 1200 lawn, within three feet of the path which the chief takes to go to the house.

The officers hurried to the hill, revolver in hand and flashed the police light as they went. Mrs. Brown saw the police light, and opening the door called out:

"Look out, boys, he's in that clump of bushes."

With that the man jumped from his place of concealment and ran up Allen street, in the direction of the Allen farm. The officers started in pursuit, firing as they ran. Faulkner fired three shots and Brown two at the retreating figure, none of which took effect, so far as known. The fellow disappeared in the darkness, and the officers halted to listen for sound of his footsteps, hoping to find out if he was still in the road. They heard nothing. Presently a team came along with Special Officer L. N. Gauthier and Ben Gilley, who had been dispatched to the place by authorities down town. No trace of the man was discovered.

It is supposed that he vaulted the stonewall and ran back toward this city by a wide detour, crossing the Williams-town railroad track and again getting on to lower Prospect street by way of Fairview street. Mrs. Edward Thayer, who resides just below the junction of Fairview and Prospect streets, saw a man walking hurriedly down the hill. He was the same man whom she had seen a short time before following Mrs. Brown and daughter up the hill. On the former occasion Mrs. Thayer's attention had been called to the man's suspicious actions, as he followed the women. She said to her husband: "Those women must be scared."

Then she saw the police hurrying by, followed soon by the team, so she decided to watch for development. About half an hour later she saw the same suspicious man going back down the hill, as if he was in a hurry.

With the description she was able to give and that of Mrs. Brown and daughter the police have patched together the following as a man very much wanted: Below medium height, probably five feet, five or six inches, dark complexioned, wearing small mustache, bald spot on top of head, clothed in dark suit, felt hat. That the man was partly bald was ascertained by Mrs. Brown when the fellow took off his hat while standing in the barn door. The reflection from the only lighted lamp fell directly on his head.

The place where the fellow concealed himself in the bushes is plainly evident today, as the twigs are bent.

A young man who lives on Prospect street was going home at about that time, and when he got part way up the hill he met two men who told him he had better not go up as two "cops" had just gone up.

"I don't care; I haven't done anything," the young man replied and went along.

Just beyond the bridge over the Williams-town railroad track he saw a man standing on the sidewalk. The man
